Carnage Nov'84

(A Singular Genocide of its kind)

The Carnage Nov'84 qualifies to go down in the history, as the most cruel atrocity ever inflicted on the mankind. Thousands of law abiding innocent citizens were mercilessly slaughtered in broad day light on the streets of Delhi and other places, not by any foreign invaders but by own countrymen abetted by the authorities, the protectors of Civil Society.

The victims, sons of the soil, a tiny minority (Sikhs) of our Nation, a community with a proud record of unmatched sacrifices spread over five centuries of their existence for the cause of motherland and civil society.

The revenge killings, were State sponsored, as two Sikh Security Guards, deeply hurt and provoked by the full scale Army assault, (Operation Blue Star) on Golden Temple, had assassinated the then Prime Minister. The assassins, one was killed in this scuffle with security man and the other was legally punished with the award of Death penalty.

But, the killers of thousands of Sikhs all over India, about 3000 in Delhi alone, even after 30 years of Carnage have gone unpunished. The souls of the innocent victims would be crying for Justice, denied thus for.

The Government of India would do well, to atone for the failure of the then Rulers in Nov'84 to protect lives and property of a large number of its innocent Citizens in Nov'84.

Message

I appreciate that the "Sikh Forum" is planning to release commemorative volume of its publication on the occasion of 30th anniversary of Sikh Genocide of November 1984. "November 1984" is black chapter in the History of Sikhs in Delhi and elsewhere in the country. In November 1984 thousands of men, women and children were massacred and burnt to death their houses were torched. burning tyres were put around their neck, shops and houses were looted. Goons and Rioters under the patronage of their political bosses were searching & trying to kill as many innocent Sikhs as possible so that they could appease their bosses. There was a complete anarchy & failure of law and order machinery. Provocative speeches by some Politicians aggravated the situation. They even provided lists of Sikh residents to their touts to kill them. Justice has not been given to the victims of 1984 Anti Sikh carnage. Our wounds are still green and the Govt. has done nothing to heal them. Most of the killers are still roaming free and none of the politicians responsible for these riots have been punished. As the famous saying goes "Justice delayed is justice denied", thirty years have been passed but Sikh Community still continues struggle for justice to the breaved and affected persons.

I appreciate your efforts to work for the cause of justice, protection, of human rights and strengthening the secular values. I pray to 'Akal Purakh Waheguru' to give you strength and courage to continue your efforts relentlessly. I am sure this publication will be an eye opener and the younger generation who is not aware of these incidents will be enlightened.

Unforgettable 1984

I clearly remember that on 31 October 2014 I was in Sanaa the capital of North Yemen as part of the official delegation of the state visit of the President of India to that country. Early in the morning a telephone call came from Air Vice Marshal R.S.Naidu the Military Secretary to the President of India that everybody has to reach the airport as the President has cancelled the State visit and was going to India. When we reached the airport the President also reached after some time along with the President of Yemen. Immediately on special Air India aircraft we proceeded towards Delhi. I immediately went to the cabin of Giani Ji and there he told me that Shri Alexander who was the Principal Secretary of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had called him and had informed that the PM has been shot by her bodyguards and she has been taken to the hospital. Nothing more was disclosed to Giani Ji. After coming out of the President's cabin I briefed the media contingent about the happenings in New Delhi. Prabhu Chawla, Sardar Satinder Singh, Inderjit and other Journalists started forming their opinions. Prabhu Chawla and Satinder Singh said that Indira Gandhi must have died in the shootout as she has been shot from close range by the body guards.

Giani Ji discussed the future course of action with his Secretary and Romesh Bhandari the then Foreign Secretary. Giani Ji had made up his mind to appoint Shri Rajiv Gandhi as the Prime Minister and he disclosed this to the Journalists. As there was no facility of telephone in the aircraft during those days so no further information was forthcoming. The special aircraft of the President landed at Delhi airport at 16:00 Hrs. From airport he went to AIIMS and normal convoy of officers in cars followed. The security on the route was less than expected. My car was fourth in the convoy of the President and when we were passing through R.K.Puram some miscreants were seen to be shouting slogans. They immediately rushed to the car and started hitting my car with lathis and threw a burning torch inside the car but my alert driver immediately threw it out and drove the car out of the harm's way towards Rashtrapati Bhawan. I was saved with grace of Akaal Purkh. No policeman came to help us at that time. During those times our drivers used to wear turbans. When Giani Ji after visiting Shrimati Indira Gandhi came to his car, slogans were being raised against him and the mob was closing in on his car. The security detachment of the President cleared the way for the car with great difficulty .Immediately after reaching Rashtrapati Bhawan he summoned the Vice President R.Venkataraman and sent him to All India Radio to announce the death of Shrimati Indira Gandhi.At 18:00 Hrs Shri Rajiv Gandhi was administered the Oath and was appointed Prime Minister along with four other Cabinet Ministers including Buta Singh.

At about 20:00 hrs I started receiving telephone calls that anti Sikh mob was on the rampage targeting Sikhs and their properties.And there was hue and cry all over .I immediately went to Giani ji's room and in the room and there were present his daughter Dr Gurdip Kaur and Sardar Kulwant Singh Private Secretary .He was surprised initially but when complete report was given to him , the seriousness of the situation dawned on him .I came back to my house and throughout the night I was getting reports of atrocities .In the morning I was informed by Kulwant Singh that till late night Giani Ji tried to contact the Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi but in vain.This is very surprising as few hours ago he was administered oath and was appointed as PM by him.This fact was recently confirmed by Dr Gurdip Kaur the daughter of the President who was present at Rashtrapati Bhawan when the situation was unfolding.She also confirmed that the President was helpless.Next day the situation became worse as there was large scale genocide of the Sikhs and the destruction of their home and properties. The situation in the outer areas was worst and even spread to the posh areas of Delhi. The Sikhs were attacked very systematically and killed by burning them alive.The Historians compared it with the genocide done by Nadir Shah centuries back in Delhi. The Gurudwaras in the Colonies were burnt down and the police was nowhere to be seen.The police was assisting the mob in targeting the Sikhs and was seen to be attacking the Sikhs who were defending themselves.

I remember that I.K.Gujral,Air Chief Marshal Arjan Singh and General J.S.Arora had come to the Rashtrapati Bhawan and painted a very grim picture.They asked for the intervention of the President .They also met the Home Minister P. Narsimha Rao.The whole Government was busy in the funeral arrangements and nobody bothered about the Sikhs.Even the Sikhs belonging to Congress Party were attacked while on way to Teen Murti Bhawan to pay their last respects to Shrimati Indira Gandhi .On that day Gurudwara Rakab Ganj Sahib was also attacked and the granthis inside were killed. The gate of the Gurudwara was burnt,It was all visible from Rashtrapati Bhawan.The whole day Army was not called and only in the evening the Army was asked for by the Govt. Ironically it was called from Meerut and not from Delhi Cantt., It only arrived on 2nd November 1984 the next day.And it is not known that who was responsible for the delay till date .When the Army arrived it did only flag march and no shoot at sight orders were given .

I remember that at that hour of difficulty B.J.P leaders Shri V.K.Malhotra and Madan Lal Khurana had met the President and told him that Sikh passengers in trains were being dragged and killed at Saifabad and Ghaziabad railway stations. Malhotra Ji took team of volunteers to Saifabad and saved many Sikhs. For three days Delhi was orphaned and there was no sign of law and order , thousands of Sikhs were massacred in Delhi and at other places in India only because they were wearing turbans .Many Sikh army Officers and Other Ranks were also killed in the Trains and other places.

This cruel reality cannot be forgotten and there are many unanswered questions that

- * Why innocent were massacred?
- * Why the Police connived with the mob ?
- * Why the army was not called immediately ?
- * Who were the conspirators in the genocide of Sikhs?
- * We are still waiting for the answers !

The Nightmare of First Week of November 1984

Some dates remain permanently fixed in your memory. In my case it started on October 31, 1984. I was then a judge in Delhi High Court. I was coming back in the evening after inspecting Shahdara Courts when I heard the tragic news of killing of Mrs. Indira Gandhi. It was a shock to the whole nation, because notwithstanding the gory murder of Gandhiji, India had not believed in political assassination. But then individuals reactions to circumstances are difficult to fathom. The killing was done by two body guard posted at Mrs. Gandhi residence. One of them was immediately shot on the spot. The other persons along with one other were also found to be involved in the murder and were convicted. It was possibly a continuation of commutative effect of equally tragic and unpardonable decision of Mrs. Gandhi to have sent army in the Golden Temple. The court found that there was only conspiracy by these three persons to kill Mrs. Gandhi. No other outside person was found to be involved in conspiracy. But what followed assassination is a nightmare which will ever haunt the nation – it was the cold calculated murder generated by Congress party in power resulting in the about 3000 Sikhs being butchered in cold blood. This unpardonable crime by a political Party, like that committed in Gujarat in 2002 will remain a permanent scar of shame on those who participated and encouraged it.

The situation outside was so horrible because the mobs were going round Delhi targeting Sikhs – there was total absence of law and order – looting of Sikh houses was openly done. Such was the unchecked situation that one of my colleague in Delhi High Court, a Sikh judge and his family was accommodated in the lounge of High Court, as we could not assure them safety and protection in their home which was hardly less than 1 K.m. from the High Court. The shame of this helplessness still haunts me.

I myself went to an area where my personal Secretary (a Sikh) and other High Court staff had their residences. Fortunately they unitedly took a determined stand and the marauders were somehow kept away. Lajpat Rai Bhawan, Society had opened office in its premises for riot victims. There volunteers were being sent to the city and trying to help Sikh victims as much as possible by making their arrangement for their safety. I used to go in the evening to Lajpat Bhawan to participate in the programme for collection of clothes and other materials and for detailing visits of volunteers to the affected localities.

Police was not recording FIRs and placing all kinds of hindrances. An application was moved complaining about this before me to complain. It is correct that normally FIR have to be registered in the police station which has jurisdiction over that particular locality. But in that fearful situation it was hardly possible for Sikhs from various areas to go to separate police stations to get FIR recorded. So I issued notice and told the government Advocate that I am ordering that all FIRs which had already been collected throughout Delhi by People Union for Civil Liberties (PUCL) will be taken to one police station (which the government may designate) and filed there. After this it will be for the government to distribute these FIRs to the respective police stations. To be honest, I knew my order may not have been strictly legal – but then circumstances were so extraordinary that not to have so acted would have been worse – it would have cast a shadow on the strength of the courts which are expected to come to the aid of oppressed (at all times). The character and strength of the courts is judged alone by the fact as to how they act in such extraordinary circumstances.

Another instance arose when people were demanding the appointment of a Commission to enquire into 1984 killings. A PIL was filed which came up before my Division Bench. The then Attorney General appeared for the Union Government and argued against. I however felt that it was important matter and needed to be examined at regular hearing. My colleague Wad J. was also of the same opinion. So we fixed the matter for regular hearing after a short vacation of High Court when it reopens. But such was the panic in the government circles that undue pressure was put on the then High Court Chief Justice. The result was that when High Court opened after vacation, I found that my roster had been changed – I was now put on criminal side – the result was obvious – the matter could not be heard by me. The matter was then heard by another Bench and the petition dismissed. But such was the indignant public reaction that the Government itself appointed Justice Ranganath Misra Commission. But its findings shocked every impartial observer. As a matter of fact the conduct of Union Government was such as to infuse no confidence right from the beginning.

A committee of eminent citizens was also formed. Its members amongst others included Justice S. M. Sikri former Chief Justice of India, Mr. Govind Narain former Home Secretary, union of India. There was total Non cooperation from the government – yet the committee came to certain prima facie findings, where it condemned that available police force was not used in an effective manner. The Committee wrote to Shri Rajiv Gandhi, the Prime Minister seeking a meeting so as to discuss important points with a view to emphasize that official Enquiry Commission be appointed as to instill public confidence. But surprisingly Rajiv Gandhi did not even reply nor gave interview to such an eminent committee – can you imagine how much the atmosphere was vitiated by partisan ends even at the highest level. The expected hollowness of the Ranganathan report corroborated the fears of all of us about the partisan role played by then Congress Central Government.

The various question raised by PUCL in its report of 1984 have not even been answered by now – at least the present government has no excuse not to disclose the truth. PUCL in its report gave the following finding which show the almost total partisan working of the administration, making this tragedy still more tragic. The report said;

“Men at the top in the administration and the ruling party displayed repeatedly a curious lack of concern often bordering on deliberate negligence of duty and responsibility throughout the period of October 31, to November, 4. The newly sworn in Home Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao was said to have assured the BJP leader Atal Behari Vajpayee on October 31 evening that “everything would be brought under control within a couple of hours”. Gautam Kaul, Additional Commissioner of Police in front of the All India Medical Institute, referring to the disturbances which were just breaking out, said: “We cannot deal with the situation of this nature”. Strangely enough, even after this, Mr. Kaul has been made Additional Commissioner, Security - In spite of such warning’s given well in advance.”

“Soon after the assassination (October 31), we heard from a reliable source, a meeting were held at I Safdarjung Road, the Prime Minister’s official residence where the then Lt. Governor P G Gavai, a Congress (I) leader M L Fotedar and the Police Commissioner among others, met. A Senior Police Officer present at the meeting expressed the view that the army should be called as otherwise there would be a holocaust. No attention was paid to the view.”

On November 1, when almost all of Delhi was aflame, an opposition MP rang up a Minister in Rajiv Gandhi’s new cabinet, and the Home Minister, Narasimha Rao, to inform them about the situation in the city and the need for army to be called and curfew would be imposed. (Several citizens including some senior government officials went to the President of India on the afternoon of November 1, and they were told the Government was still considering whether to call out the army). But our experience on November 1 tells a different story.

The report continues “as already mentioned earlier, till late night there were no signs of either curfew or army, while miscreants were on the rampage in front of the police. In the heart of the city – Cannought Circus – Sikh owned shops were being set on fire right under the nose of heavy para-military and police pickets. We later heard that the DC of Faridabad had asked for army on November 1, but troops arrived only on November 3.”

None of these questions have been answered so when Nanavati Commission was appointed. I wished its terms of reference had been on the pattern of Truth and Conciliation Commission appointed in South Africa by Nelson Mandela. I still feel that this aspect should be examined by the Central Government because I am of the firm opinion that apart from punishing the guilty it is important to cleanse the air and to uphold democratic values and this can be done only when all questions are answered frankly by the government to the satisfaction of those who suffered and still continue to do so – This is the mandate of Universal Human Rights.

Critical Observation on Sikh Carnage

I was the Additional DCP for Delhi's North District when riots broke out following the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by members of her security detail. I believe with the limited resources and staff at my command, I tried to protect members of the Sikh community and control the rioting mobs from targeting their victims. There was hardly any inter-district communication other than some information trickling down from the PCR-net – of rioting in other parts of Delhi simultaneously! I would have expected police in these parts too to have reacted and controlled the mob-violence as warranted.

In their book "When a Tree Shook Delhi" senior editor Manoj Mitta and Senior Advocate H.S. Phoolka have to an extent praised my role during the riots for ably controlling the violence that erupted outside the Sis Ganj gurudwara on Chandni Chowk in the city's old quarters, despite having just a few men with me.

'Unlike his counterparts in other parts of Delhi, Pereira did not disarm the Sikhs and leave them at the mercy of the mobs. Instead, he persuaded them to go inside the gurudwara by promising to provide them security. He kept his word and dealt with the mobs sternly despite having a meagre force at his command.'

'It took a lot of courage and ingenuity to do so. Once he got the Sikhs to go indoors, the mobs from both directions were emboldened to pelt stones with greater vigour. All that Pereira and his men could do in return was threaten to fire with their revolvers.'

'In a gritty display of policing, they managed to keep the crowd at a safe distance from the gurudwara till a small reinforcement came along with tear smoke ammunition.'

When the officer saw a mob looting a watch shop owned by a Sikh at Chandni Chowk, he ordered his men to fire at the miscreants. A constable fired three rounds, killing one rioter instantly.

'Driving home the rule of law, Pereira announced then and there a reward of Rs. 200 to the constable, making sure the reward was heard by everyone as he announced it on a loud hailer. The firing and the reward had the desired - and expected - effect. Sis Ganj Gurudwara was saved as the mobs melted away.'

Even after thirty years as the dust refuses to settle over the carnage of 1984, my own thoughts go back to that day 30-years ago when I almost strangled the first journalist who strayed into Delhi's north district and into my path, just five days after the carnage had commenced. "Where were you guys all these days?" was the question I yelled at him. "Where were you when I opened fire, killed people, before people started killing Sikhs!?"

I have held my silence in all these years, the only statement ever given by me being before the Ved Marwah in-house police department's fact-finding enquiry – then directed by SS Jog, who replaced Subash Tandon as police Commissioner soon after the riots.

Despite the fact that I deposed before no Government appointed Commission, nor was I considered worthy to be summoned by any that enquired into the Sikh riots, tid-bits did appear in the media – about some of us having done our duty as expected. That when Delhi Police was in the dock facing Parliamentary castigation for the carnage, it was the name of yours truly that headed the list weakly presented to the powers that be, to help bolster up an undefendable "Delhi-Police case" in Parliament. This, in an attempt to tell that Delhi police did act, that officers did show initiative without waiting for orders from superiors! One is told there is proof to this effect in the record of Parliamentary debates in the immediate aftermath of the 'riots', and in Reports of some of the earlier Commissions, now also available on the internet.

The journalist's answer to my yellings was a candid "well, nothing happened in the North – at least not in the scale as things occurred elsewhere in Delhi". The perception, to an extent acceptable, though factually and substantially wrong! Things did happen in North Delhi, but were controlled to the extent possible, by a handful of committed police officers and men who acted with tremendous grit and courage to justify the uniform they wore. None of these who controlled the riots and saved lives of Sikhs got any recognition for it, nor were they rewarded – as were perhaps some of our colleagues elsewhere; some even with gallantry medals for killing scared and paranoid Sikhs who unfortunately opened fire on the police in their own self-defence.

30 yrs. of Commissions & Omissions

Why it is relevant even after three decades to talk of the denial of justice to the victims of the anti-Sikh riots. Apart from justice, punishment is meant to act as a deterrent, so a message goes that no one is above law.

In January 1985 in an interview to a leading magazine on the anti-Sikh riots, then Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi stated: "Inquiry would not help as it would rake up issues that are really dead". He was commenting on the demand for inquiry into the massacre of 3,000 Sikhs in the Capital of India and about 7,000 across the country.

For Rajiv Gandhi the issue was "dead" within two months of the massacre that took place in day light on the streets of Delhi. Between the noon of November 1 and November 3, a Sikh was killed every minute. During these 2,880 minutes, 2,733 (official figures) Sikhs were killed in Delhi alone.

The Home Minister had given a statement in Parliament that 600 Sikhs were killed across India. In response to this statement, Atal Bihari Vajpayee, then Leader of the Opposition, had released a list of 2,700 killed in Delhi alone. Over 50,000 people were languishing in relief camps.

Probe begins

Six months later, the Rajiv Gandhi government agreed to appoint a Commission of Inquiry as a part of political negotiation between Sant Longowal, then Akali Dal president, and Rajiv Gandhi. For any democratic government, enforcing the rule of law should be paramount, but for the Rajiv government it was only a political move to appoint a Commission of Inquiry.

The terms of the Mishra Commission of Inquiry, which was constituted with a sitting Supreme Court Judge, J Ranganath Mishra, were not the usual terms of reference which are to find out how the massacre happened; who took part in it; who are to be prosecuted; role of law-enforcing agencies; and action to be taken against them. In short-to fix accountability for the death of innocent citizens. On the contrary, the only term of reference of the commission was to enquire into “allegations if the violence was organized”.

We requested Akali Dal leaders to get the terms of reference changed, but for reasons best known to them, this did not happen. The commission began its proceedings with these flawed objectives. Human rights groups were left with no choice but to participate in these proceedings.

An umbrella organisation of human rights groups was constituted for this purpose named the Citizen’s Justice Committee (CJC). With Justice SM Sikri, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, as its president and I as secretary. The Mishra Commission started its proceedings in July 1985 and submitted its report in August 1986. The report was published and tabled in Parliament in February 1987. In his report, Mishra stated that it was not a part of his terms of reference to identify any person. These findings came as a bombshell as after holding a long and tedious inquiry for over a year, he simply recommended the formation of three other committees to do the real job.

Earlier, the Police Commissioner had deputed Additional Police Commissioner Ved Marwah to inquire into the role of the police. Ironically, the allegation of police complicity of the Commissioner of Police and Senior Additional Commissioners were assigned to an inquiry by an officer junior to them, nonetheless Marwah did conduct the inquiry as mandated.

Rahul Bedi, a journalist, had filed a writ petition in the Delhi High Court in the third week of November 1984 on how two seniormost Additional Commissioners of Police and a Deputy Commissioner of Police ignored the information given to them by him [Rahul Bedi] about the Trilokpuri massacre, which had resulted in the killing of 400 Sikhs. The government took the stand before the High Court that the Ved Marwah inquiry had been constituted and therefore the court should not entertain the writ petition. Unfortunately, going by the assurance of the government, the court dismissed the petition.

In October 1985, Marwah completed his inquiry, however, he was directed not to submit the report. It became clear why, when he later informed the media that he had identified many police officers for complicity and gross negligence. He was also directed to hand over all his evidence and papers to the Mishra Commission, who would identify the guilty police officers. Marwah passed on all papers to the Mishra Commission. However, certain important papers out of that record are missing. When I asked Justice Mishra in his chamber about those papers, he informed me that those had been destroyed by the police under instructions of the government.

Mishra in his report refused to do his job and identify the guilty whereas Marwah, who identified guilty law enforcers, was asked to discontinue his work. Yet, regarding the killings in Kanpur, Mishra held then District Magistrate Brijendra Yadav responsible for the killing of 125 Sikhs in Kanpur. An Army officer, Captain Bareth, had submitted his report to the Mishra Commission that Yadav stopped the Army from taking any action against the mob which was indulging in killing, looting and arson in the presence of the Army. The Army wanted to take action but Yadav ordered it not to. The Mishra Commission recommended action against Yadav, but interestingly, Yadav got three promotions after that and retired from the post equivalent to the Chief Secretary.

Curiously, Justice Ranganath Mishra became the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and was made a Rajya Sabha MP by the Congress after retirement.

In February 1987, when the Mishra Commission report was tabled in Parliament, almost two years and four months had passed since the carnage, but even the number of citizens killed was not known. We had submitted a list of 3,878 before the commission but Mishra recommended the appointment of another committee to ascertain the number of killings.

The Ahuja Committee was appointed to do this job. Ahuja submitted its report in August 1987 and put the figure at 2,733 in Delhi alone. It took the largest democracy in the world three years to even put a figure on its citizens who had been murdered in a span of just two days.

More committees, little action

The other committee appointed on the recommendation of the Mishra Commission was the Kapoor-Mittal Committee to inquire into the role of the police which was really the unfinished task of Ved Marwah. In 1990, this committee identified 72 police officers for connivance and gross negligence and recommended forthwith dismissal of 30 police officers without any inquiry. None of these officers has been dismissed and not even a major penalty has been awarded to any one of them. This committee also found the allegations of Rahul Bedi correct and had recommended action against Sewa Dass and Nikhil Kumar. Far from action, they were promoted, not once but thrice.

Among the three police officers named by Rahul Bedi were DCP Sewa Dass who got three promotions and retired as Special Commissioner of Police and Additional Commissioners HC Jatav and Nikhil Kumar. Nikhil Kumar also got three promotions and retired as DGP. Later, he became a Congress MP.

The other committees were to recommend the registration of cases. Three successive committees were appointed to complete this task-Jain-Banerjee Committee, Poti-Rosha Committee and Jain-Aggarwal Committee. These committees recommended registration of cases, but their reports were not fully implemented.

The Dhillon Committee was appointed to recommend measures for the rehabilitation of victims. This committee recommended that business establishments which had insurance cover but were not given insurance claim on the technical ground that riots are not covered under the policy, should be paid compensation. The government did not accept this recommendation and all such insurance claims were rejected in spite of having insurance cover.

The ninth committee-Narula Committee- was appointed in December 1993 by the Madan Lal Khurana government and this committee recommended the registration of cases against HKL Bhagat, Sajjan Kumar and Jagdish Tytler. The recommendations were not fully implemented.

The 10th committee was the Nanavati Commission, which was appointed in January 2000. It submitted its report in February 2005. On its recommendation, cases were registered against Sajjan Kumar and Jagdish Tytler, and compensation was announced. The Prime Minister package amounting to Rs 717 crore was declared. One of the clauses of the package was to give employment to the children of victims, which has not been implemented yet, and almost Rs 200 crore from the said amount is yet to be distributed. Of this, the Modi government has declared Rs 166 crore to be distributed to victims by giving them Rs 5 lakh for each person killed. Under the law, punishment and compensation both are a must, one is not a substitute for the other.

In February 2014, the Arvind Kejriwal government appointed an SIT to reopen and reinvestigate 237 cases which had been closed by the police as “untraced” and never sent for trial to the court. After Kejriwal’s resignation, this SIT was stalled by the UPA government and now continues to be stalled by the NDA government.

Punishment as deterrent

Why is it relevant even 30 years later? Punishment to the guilty is meant to deliver justice and also to act as a deterrent for the future. A message needs to go that no one is above law in this great democracy.

But for our successive governments, this issue is not on their agenda. For Rajiv Gandhi's Congress government it was "dead" since January 1985 itself, and now for the BJP-Akali government, it has been "dead" since the last five months. They have not taken any step to secure punishment for guilty and to deliver justice.

When we talk about time having elapsed, I remember Simon Wiensental, the famous "Nazi hunter" and a victim of the Holocaust, who followed Nazis for 63 years (1942-2005) till his death for the atrocities committed by them against Jews. Ustasha Dinko Sakic, a Nazi commandant, was prosecuted and sentenced 50 years after the World War, as crimes against life have no limitation in any country. We will pursue justice with the same spirit, for it is innocent citizens who are dead, not the law.

What the probe panels recommended

Justice GT Nanavati Commission : It enhanced cash compensation to victims, but no criminal cases were registered. It indicted several Congress leaders.

Ved Marwah Commission : Nearly completed inquiry, but was directed not to proceed further as Ranganath Misra Commission had been appointed.

Misra Commission : Records of the Marwah Commission were transferred to it, but it was alleged Marwah's handwritten notes containing vital information were not given to the commission. It stated it was not part of the term of reference to identify any person and recommended the formation of three committees.

RC Shrivastav Committee : Looked into police mechanism to prevent disturbances. Suggestion for three more police sub-divisions in Delhi and 25 police stations was accepted, and Rs 31 crore sanctioned.

Dhillon Committee : Headed by Gurdial Singh Dhillon, it recommended businesses that had insurance but were not compensated as riots were not covered by insurers should be compensated. The government did not accept it; suggestion on cash compensation was accepted.

RK Ahuja Committee : Put the death toll in Delhi at 2,733.

Kapoor-Mittal Committee : Appointed to probe into the conduct of the police. While Kapoor submitted a general report, Mittal identified a dozen police officials who had done a creditable job and recommended action against 72 police personnel.

Jain-Banerjee Committee : It recommended cases, but none was registered. Sajjan Kumar's co-accused obtained a stay on the committee's functioning.

Potti-Rosha Committee : It recommended the registration of cases against Sajjan Kumar and examined over 1,000 affidavits and recommended 30 cases for prosecution. Sajjan Kumar secured anticipatory bail. The members resigned.

Jain-Aggarwal Committee : Recommended 48 cases, including against Congress leaders HKL Bhagat, Sajjan Kumar, Dharamdas Shastri and Jagdish Tytler. It wound up in 1993 with no action taken.

Narula Committee : Wanted cases against Bhagat, Sajjan, and Tytler.

As many as 2,733 people died at the hands of frenzied mobs in the Capital of the country.

Conviction rate

A mere 13 cases of murder have seen convictions and only 30 persons have been convicted in the past 30 years.

Cases registered, and closed

In Delhi, 587 cases were registered, of which 237 were closed by the police and marked as "untraced" (legalese for no progress in investigation). A Special Investigation Team formed by Arvind Kejriwal during his short stint as the Chief Minister of Delhi was meant to reopen every such case. "Of these 30 persons convicted, almost all are now on bail or their convictions have been condoned by higher courts," says Jarnail Singh, author of the book "I Accuse...The Anti-Sikh Violence of 1984".

'Why no action ?'

The Kapoor-Mittal Committee, appointed in February 1987 to inquire into the delinquencies and conduct of the police, recommended action against 72 police personnel and the dismissal of six officials, but nothing has happened. "Why?" asks author Jarnail Singh, who lives in Lajpat Nagar, New Delhi.

Compensation, less for some

In 1984, the compensation for those killed was Rs 10,000. In 1987, another Rs 10,000 was added. In 1996, Bhajan Kaur won a case against the Delhi Administration and Rs 3.3 lakh was given, but only to Delhi victims. In 2006, Rs 3.5 lakh was given as relief following the Nanavati commission report. The Modi government has announced another Rs 5 lakh. Meaning, affected families in Delhi would get Rs 12 lakh for each of their dead and those outside Delhi would get Rs 8.7 lakh.

No balm

In case of injuries, each victim was given Rs 2,000 in 1984. Another Rs 1.25 lakh was paid after the Nanavati Commission's recommendation.

Property loss

In 1984, property losses were compensated with Rs 10,000 in case of total loss and Rs 5,000 in case of partial damage. It was enhanced to Rs 90,000 and Rs 45,000, respectively, following the Nanavati Commission report.

Irrefutable Facts : Carnage 84

(Forgiveness is our Creed – Forget we never)

Numerous researchers, observers, commentators have written a lot on the unabated and unchecked gruesome violence against the Sikh community in the first week of November 1984 after the tragic assassination of Mrs Indira Gandhi, Many are writing and expressing concern even after 30 years of the carnage. The reasons are obvious. What happened in 1984 in Delhi and some other parts of the country was not only unprecedented and outrageous, but was also abetted and supported by the state authorities. The victims after three decades of the event the victims are still awaiting for the justice and redress.

In spite of government's efforts to suppress the truth, various reporters and investigations conducted by civil society organisations like PUCL, PUDR, Citizens for Democracy, People's relief committee, the facts collected by journalists and also from government appointed commissions / committees, by now it is clear that over four fateful days about 10000 Sikhs were hunted, humiliated and massacred in an organised killing spree. In Delhi alone over 3000 Sikhs were murdered, women gang raped, properties looted and over 70 Gurudwaras burnt. The carnage was so all pervasive that no Sikh irrespective of his position felt safe. In fact the process started with stoning on the convoy of none other than the President of India, Giani Zail Singh.

A number of investigative and analytical reports have brought out that the then ruling party, Congress(I) and to an extent government's assertion, that the violence was an unplanned response to the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by two Sikh bodyguards, holds no ground. Investigations have revealed that there was an impeccable pattern according to which the violence erupted and that the mobs like disciplined cadres kept to that model and implicitly obeyed the directions of their masters, the Congress-I functionaries.

In a recent article in Caravan, Hartosh Bal quoting Avtar Singh Gill the former Secretary Ministry of Petroleum, brings out that the violence was indeed orchestrated and that the clearance came from the top. Gill is quoted as saying:

“ on November 1, 1984 Lalit Suri of Lalit Hotels who used to come and see me often, dropped by. He was the errand boy for Rajiv Gandhi and since he often needed some work done, he was close to me. He came to me in the ministry and said, clearance has been given by Arun Nehru for the killings in Delhi and killings have started. The strategy is to catch Sikh the youth, putting a tyre around his neck, douse him with kerosene and set him afire.

“This will calm the anger of the Hindus”.

Gill is also quoted as saying that, ‘Suri told me that I should be careful though my name is not in the voters list, the Delhi Gurudwara voters list. They (rioters) have been provided this list.’

This will end on the third (of November).

This revelation confirms the observations made in the report, “Truth About Delhi Violence” prepared by Citizens for Democracy in January 1985. It says :

“Several meetings were held all over Delhi- Central, Outer and Trans Yamuna area - in the late hours of the 31st October 84 to give final touches, as it were, to every minute detail that nothing was left out to successfully exterminate the Sikhs. It was as if that brigades were going to attack an enemy territory.

From collection of kerosene and incendiary material for dousing the men before they were burnt; to collection of killers both from villages outside the areas of attack as well as from among the more amenable neighbours;

from fixing the hour of attack to be launched simultaneously everywhere in Delhi in the forenoon between 9 and 11 AM ;

to organising the attack and deciding if it should be repetitive or two pronged as in a war depending on the size of the mob ;

from identifying the jhuggis and houses of the Sikhs from amongst the forest of jhuggies and houses occupied by thousands of non-Sikhs;

to disarming the Sikhs and dissuading them from taking out their Prabhat Pheri; from fixing the sequence of the targets of attack;

to flouting the rumours - everything was done with amazing precision.

Gurudwaras were first to be attacked in every area of Delhi according to the plans, because they were supposed to be the arsenals of Sikhs and also the symbol of their collective faith and courage, so they had to be destroyed first.

The report, "Who Are The Guilty" prepared by People's Union of Civil Liberties and People's Union for Democratic Rights under Justice S.M. Sikri and Justice V.M. Tarkunde, in December 1984 itself said,

"We were told by the local eyewitnesses in all the areas we visited that well known congress (I) leaders and workers led and directed the arsonist and the local cadres of the congress(I) identified the Sikh houses and shops.

A senior police official who for understandable reasons does not want to be named printed out "the shop signs are either in Hindi or English. How do you expect the illiterate arsonist to know whether these shops belonged to Sikhs or Hindus, unless they were identified to them by someone who is either educated or a local person". In South Delhi buses of the DTC were used by the miscreants to move from place to place in their murderous journey. How could DTC allow its buses to be used by criminals".

Manoj Mitta and H.S.Phoolka in their book "When a Tree Shook in Delhi" describe the details about the State support, connivance or even the sponsorship of the carnage. Justification was provided by none other than the Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi who in a public speech said "When a big tree falls the earth beneath it is bound to shake"

As a good number of reports, books and articles have exposed the truth repetition of the events and processes is not our intention here. Four things are clear, One what happened in November 1984. was not a communal riot as it was not one religious community versus other, it was state assisted massacre, Two, the Congress(I) was actively involved in that, Three, the administration and the police did not do any thing to protect the Sikhs rather they helped the rioters, And Fourth, there was deliberate delay in calling the military to deal with the situation.

Since justice has yet not been done, victims not redressed and lessons not learnt, it should be ensured issue does not die. Sikh Forum and many other involved civil society organizations and some crusaders for justice have been making use of every possible opportunity to raise the issue.

The Thirtieth Anniversary gives us and the Nation an opportunity for introspection. Half hearted apologies by government that too under pressure and unkept assurances for justice only adds to the betrayal by the Government. Needless to say even after 30 years the hurt and the anger and sense of betrayal remains in the community. The perpetrators, abettors and defaulting policemen remain not only free but in many cases have been rewarded. Investigation agencies continue to be manipulated to save them. More serious, is the fact that it is not that state has not been able to deliver justice but, state itself has made all possible efforts to see that perpetrators are not brought to book.

Late S. Patwant Singh wrote, by refusing to send to the courts the few Congress functionaries who were identified as colluding in the mass murder of the Sikhs, the Union Government has betrayed a breathtaking lack of balance as of saving the skins of a handful of criminal elements within its folds is more important than the outrage hurt and disillusionment of 20 million Sikhs.

We take this opportunity to reiterate the demand and concerns of those who believe in the imperatives of democracy - rule of law, equality for all, respect for human rights and above all justice, that those involved in the carnage, and who backed the same, how so ever influential and resourceful they may be, are identified and penalized. No number of Commissions, inquiries or promises can either assuage the grief of those whose loved ones perished. No matter how long ago the crime (murder) took place and how much more time it takes it must be subjected to Law.

Hindustan Times in an Editorial, in August 2005 expressed, Justice in this instance is not merely about revenge, but the principle of moral rightness which ought to define the character of the society we live in. It is about the fair treatment of the hapless who were slaughtered for no fault of their own.

On this 30th anniversary, let us make it clear that we must not allow the anger to die down and keep the momentum for the cause of justice, harmonious coexistence and protection of human rights. This is necessary for prevention of such like atrocities on innocent people, which continue in various ways.

Perhaps it can be the most appropriate tribute to the martyrs of 1984 carnage.

Memories of 1984

Let me begin my story from my diary of 1984, to be precise that of March 24. On that day I escorted my teacher Dr. Ganda Singh to the Rashtrapati Bhawan where he was to be conferred Padma Bhushan by Giani Zail Singh, the then President of India. In the glittering ceremony, I noticed Mrs. Indira Gandhi, the Prime Minister, Members of her Cabinet and other dignitaries and distinguished citizens who were to be honoured for their contribution in different fields. After the ceremony when we were going out for tea, Dr. Ganda Singh, who had some eye problem, banged into glass door of the Ashoka Hall and his Padma Medal and spectacles fell on the floor. Rajiv Gandhi, who was walking next to him, quickly picked up the two items and passed them on to him and gently escorted him till the tea was over.

Later that evening, Guru Nanak Foundation arranged a reception for Dr. Ganda Singh which was attended by almost all prominent Sikhs in the national capital with S. Khushwant Singh as the main speaker. While writing my diary for that day, I felt proud that the Sikh community which constituted less than 2% of the Indian population has done so well in independent India. Some of the prominent names that came to my mind were those of Baldev Singh, first Defence Minister of independent India, Surjit Singh Majithia, Deputy Defence Minister of India, Swaran Singh as the Minister for Defence and later External Affairs, Hukam Singh and Gurdial Singh Dhillon as Speakers of the Lok Sabha, Buta Singh, Minister for Parliamentary Affairs, Sport, Works and Housing, Dr. Manmohan Singh as Governor of the Reserve Bank of India, Arjan Singh and Dilbagh Singh as Chiefs of the Indian Air Force and many Sikhs in other important positions. In spite of talk of grievances, some real and some imaginary, Sikhs were doing well in all walks of life, be it business, sports or services. Little could I imagine that this best period in the history of the Sikh community would turn out to be the worst because of army action in the Golden Temple, killing of Prime Minister of India, Indira Gandhi by two of her Sikh body guards and countrywide anti-Sikh riots that followed.

On that fateful day I happened to be in Chandigarh for an official meeting where we had known that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was dead though a formal announcement was made late that evening. Memory of Bhajan Lal Government in Haryana frisking the Sikhs during the Asian Games being fresh in mind, I was advised not to travel by car and instead take an AC bus with black window panes. When I reached the Inter State Bus Terminal of Delhi, I found the place deserted. While I managed to reach my home in Hauz Khas with some difficulty, what came as the first shock was to see the Gurdwara Green Park set on fire. My family heaved a sigh of relief when I knocked at the door. In that group of 40 houses, I was the only turbaned Sikh. My immediate neighbours all Hindus were more worried about my safety than me. On the top floor a young boy had stocked soda water bottles and stones to keep the mob away in case of any attack. Another neighbour who carried his service revolver offered to stay with our family the whole night to ensure that we were duly protected.

On the 1st of November when violence spread throughout the city as a result of organized gangs taking over command of the anti-Sikh pogrom situation became rather alarming. I was advised by my teacher Prof. Bipan Chandra to move to his home in JNU who also arranged an official vehicle to pick me up with my family. I was told that mob was checking all vehicles at the I.I.T. crossing, looking out for Sikhs and it was advisable for me to hide myself in a blanket and lie down in the leg space in the Ambassador Car with my wife and daughters occupying the back seats. My wife was advised to camouflage her identity by changing her dress. It was for the first time that I found my distinct identity of which I always felt proud had become my liability in spite of my opposing militant activity in Punjab and fighting the ideology of hate throughout my teaching career.

My daughters who faced this trauma for the first time could not understand as to what was happening in a secular country. My younger daughter asked as to who had killed the Indian Prime Minister. Before I could answer, Bipan Chandra replied "Ideology of Hate". She was too young to understand that it was this ideology which led to the division of India and later killing of Mahatma Gandhi who was opposed to any division on communal lines. That night I missed my sleep and kept on thinking how political parties use ideology of hate for electoral gains. What disturbed the most was the fact that Sikhs outside Panjab who for their own reasons did not support the militant movement in Panjab had become victims of mob violence for no fault of theirs. In spite of my best efforts I could not reconcile to the change of Sikh image from trusted lieutenants of the Indian State to potential threat to its unity. I regretfully recalled how Punjab politics was communalized for electoral gains with disastrous consequences for the Sikh community and the Indian State.

Next day we heard about the violence spreading to different parts of Delhi and other parts of the country and the police and State machinery mutely watching this carnage. Later in the evening Gopi Arora, a senior civil servant who was close confidante of Rajiv Gandhi and was Secretary, Ministry of Information and Broadcasting, asked Bipan for his advice as to how to check growing violence. Bipan's answer was simple, "You control the media. Let the T.V. and radio keep on announcing rioters being killed by the police." But H.K.L. Bhagat, who was the Minister for Information and Broadcasting had other plans up his sleeves. On the contrary, he wanted to use the media to create mass hysteria against the Sikhs with an eye on the forthcoming Parliamentary elections with official machinery tacitly backing the mob, which was busy attacking Sikh houses and establishment, burning and looting their properties, killing innocent young men and raping helpless women. Mishra Commission noticed that when Mrs. Gandhi's dead body was lying in state in Teen Murti, group of people walking passed the body raised slogans Khoon ka Badla Khoon. Not only this was duly covered by country's only television channel, the Doordarshan ,but repeated for eighteen times for obvious reasons.

Attacks and pelting stones on the cars in the entourage of the President of India, who rushed to A.I.I.M.S. soon after his return from Yemen and other incidents of 31st October, 1984, are mentioned by Nanavati Commission as "first signs of public resentment resulting in angry outburst in Delhi," but what happened for three consecutive days and nights from 1st to 3rd November in the national capital in the presence of heads of many countries who had joined in the national mourning – could not have happened without a free hand given to the organized gangs consisting of party workers and criminal elements from different political outfits. Gangsters armed with weapons of destruction like pistols, petroleum and other inflammable materials surrounding hapless Sikhs inside their localities and houses points toward organized pogrom. According to the testimony of General A.S.Vaidya, the then Chief of the Army staff, 6100 soldiers were available in Delhi and he told General J.S. Jamwal that half of them could be deployed to assist the Delhi administration. According to Mishra Commission "If troops had been called on the morning of 1st November, 1984 and army columns moving in the streets properly, lives of at least 2,000 people could have been saved." Not only army help was not taken, the police was also allowed to shut their eyes and in some cases encouraged mob attacks on the Sikhs in which activists from Congress, R.S.S. and B.J.P. freely participated. According to Nanavati Commission's Report, "There is enough material on record to show that at many places police had taken away their (Sikhs) arms and other articles with which they could have defended themselves against the attacks by the mobs."

With more and more of evidence available with passage of time, it is becoming clear that instructions were given by those who engineered and supervised systematic attacks on the Sikhs as part of the pre-designed strategy. According to various independent accounts, mobs at work in the national capital were well organized, they had list of Sikh homes provided to them by the organizers from Sikh voters' lists of the Gurdwara Committee election. According to Nanavati Commission, at some places mobs indulging in violence were allowed to use D.T.C. buses or other vehicles belonging to the State Transport Corporation. The modus operandi of the attackers was almost the same in various localities. The attackers "either came armed with weapons and inflammable materials like kerosene, petrol and some white powder or were supplied with such materials soon after they were taken to the localities where the Sikhs were to be attacked." Male members of the Sikh community were taken out of their houses. They were beaten first and then burnt alive in a systematic manner. In some cases, tyres were put around their necks and then were set on fire by pouring kerosene or petrol over them. In other cases, white inflammable powder was thrown on them which immediately caught fire. This was a common pattern which was followed by the big mobs which had played havoc in certain areas."

Silver lining in the otherwise dismal picture was the role played by the well-meaning members of the civil society and organisations like P.U.C.L., P.U.D.R. and the Sikh Forum. At that difficult moment when most of the Sikhs had taken shelter in the homes of non-Sikh neighbours and friends and poor widows and children taken to relief camps, it were mainly non-Sikhs especially Mrs. Mohini Giri and her colleagues from the Guild of Service and War Widows Bhavan, who rushed relief to Teliwara and other areas in East Delhi which were not easily accessible. Faculty and students of J.N.U. played a positive role in coming out in open defence of the hapless Sikhs who had become objects of hate and ridicule overnight. Apart from checking false rumours like the 'Sikhs having poisoned all the drinking water in Delhi' and that 'trains from Punjab coming to Delhi with wagons full of Hindu dead bodies', they also organized peace marches in nearby troubled spots. It was only appropriate that when Sant Harchand Singh Longowal came to visit Delhi to express sympathy with the members of the Sikh community, the first thing he did was to visit the J.N.U. wherein he started his speech by thanking non-Sikh sisters and brothers of Delhi for saving many Sikh lives.

While immediate relief was provided to the victims of the riots in different camps, no long term strategy was planned for their emotional and economic rehabilitation and integration in the main stream. V.P. Singh, who became the Prime Minister of India in 1989, in his wisdom provided small flats to the widows of 1984 riots in Tilak Vihar, Sector 16-J, Rohini and Garhi in East of Kailash, thus giving the national capital dubious distinction of having 'widows colonies' to be used for vote bank politics during every election. In spite of Nine Enquiry Commissions, during the Congress, Janta Dal, N.D.A. and U.P.A. rule in the centre, justice has alluded the Sikhs which shows that the Indian State is either unequipped or unwilling to punish the guilty. The Sikh society and the Gurdwara Committees which have no lack of economic resources need to clear their conscience by doing something tangible for economic rehabilitation of the survivors of 1984.

In spite of Mishra Commission fixing the responsibility of Delhi carnage on Congress workers and criminal elements and giving clean chit to Congress leaders, popular Sikh memory will neither forgive nor forget H.K.L. Bhagat, Sajjan Kumar, Jagdish Tytler, Dharam Das Shastri and others for their role in anti-Sikh riots.

Now that history has taken a full circle — from November 1984, when the Sikhs were hiding their identity and taking shelter in safe havens, to May 2004 when Dr. Manmohan Singh, a turbaned Sikh, was elected to highest executive office of the Prime Minister of world's largest democracy — what should the Sikhs do? Should they forget the past? Should they live in the past? Or should they live with the past? — are the questions which have no easy answers.

Sins of Commission

How thirty years and nine official inquiries obscured the truths of the anti-Sikh violence of 1984

On Wednesday, 31 October 1984, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was assassinated by two of her guards, both Sikh. In the ensuing violence, which lasted roughly three days, 2,733 Sikhs were killed in Delhi. Sikhs were also attacked in several other Indian cities, including Kanpur, Bokaro, Jabalpur and Rourkela. It remains one of the bloodiest and most brutal episodes of communal violence in independent India.

Over the next two decades, nine commissions of inquiry were instituted. Seven of these investigated specific aspects of the tragedy, such as the death count, which was officially established by the Ahuja Committee in 1987. Two of the panels—the Ranganath Misra Commission, constituted in 1985, and the Justice GT Nanavati Commission, whose final report was published in 2005—were required to look at the violence in its entirety.

The reports of those two commissions still make for startling reading. Each recorded testimonies from numerous victims and witnesses, and took depositions from some of those accused, including police officers who had been on duty in badly affected areas. Yet there is not just a complete mismatch between the testimonies recorded and the conclusions reached—the commissions' own observations contradict their findings.

For thirty years, it has been persistently claimed—partly on the basis of these findings—that the violence following Gandhi's death was an unplanned outpouring of grief. But the records of these commissions clearly establish one thing that damns such conclusions: the condemnable but largely spontaneous violence of 31 October transformed into a clearly orchestrated massacre that continued from the 1st to the 3rd of November.

For many years, survivors, witnesses and observers have suspected that the violence was orchestrated by the highest echelons of the Congress party. Cases have been brought against some Congress leaders - notably Sajjan Kumar and Jagdish Tytler - but so far no senior politician or police officer has been sentenced.

Fresh evidence that figures in this piece suggests the orders for the violence came from the member of parliament Arun Nehru, a cousin and confidante of Indira Gandhi's son and successor Rajiv. While this evidence is indirect testimony, it is strengthened by a considerable amount of circumstantial evidence available in the Misra and Nanavati reports.

Shortly after 9 am, Indira Gandhi stepped out of her house at 1 Safdarjung Road to walk to her office in an adjacent bungalow, where Peter Ustinov was waiting with a television crew to interview her. A head constable was to heel, holding aloft an umbrella to protect Gandhi from the sun. Two other policemen and her personal secretary, RK Dhawan, followed.

The gate separating the bungalows was manned by two Sikh jawans, who had coordinated to be on the same shift. Beant Singh, armed with his service revolver, had exchanged duties with another policeman. Knowing a latrine was located near the gate, Satwant Singh, armed with a semi-automatic carbine, had stationed himself there by claiming he was suffering from dysentery.

A week earlier, both men had partaken of amrit, in a Sikh ceremony usually reserved for the most faithful. Their fervour was a direct consequence of Operation Bluestar. As Gandhi approached the gate, Beant and Satwant opened fire—five shots from Beant's revolver, 25 from Satwant's carbine. As soon as she fell to the ground, both men dropped their weapons, and were taken into custody. Gandhi was rushed to the All India Institute of Medical Sciences, where she was declared dead later that day.

The two unarmed and no longer belligerent jawans were detained by personnel from the Indo-Tibetan Border Force in a guardroom, where they soon suffered grievous gunshot wounds. While Satwant was badly injured, Beant died. (Satwant was executed by hanging four and a half years later.)

* * *

In its summary of that day's violence, the Nanavati commission wrote that the "first sign of such public resentment resulting in an angry outburst in Delhi" came around 2.30 pm, "when the public suspected that Smt. Indira Gandhi had succumbed to her injuries and started assaulting passersby Sikhs.” Further violence was noted around 5 pm, “when the cars in the entourage of President Giani Zail Singh were stoned at AIIMS.” At 6 pm, Gandhi’s death was announced on All India Radio. Soon after, Rajiv Gandhi was sworn in as prime minister.

Around the same time, “crowds had gathered in several parts of Delhi and become violent,” the Nanavati commission wrote.

The Sikhs were beaten and their vehicles were burnt. Till then, the attacks were made by persons who had collected on the roads to know what had happened and what was happening. They were stray incidents and the attacks were not at all organised. The mobs till then were not armed with weapons or inflammable materials. With whatever that became handy, they manhandled Sikhs and burnt their vehicles. There were stray incidents of damaging houses or shops of the Sikhs.

At this stage, it was clear that Sikhs were being collectively targeted, and the Delhi administration, headed by the lieutenant governor, PG Gawai, would have been justified in deploying additional forces to avert the violence. In and around the capital, the army typically maintained one infantry brigade and one artillery brigade; it could also call on whatever limited manpower was available at the Rajputana Rifles’ regimental training centre. General AS Vaidya, the Chief of the Army Staff at the time, later told the Misra commission that an additional brigade of sixteen hundred soldiers had been ordered to move from Meerut to Delhi at 10.30 am on 31 October, and that it reached the capital before midnight. The Delhi area’s commanding officer, Major General JS Jamwal, told the commission that the total number of available soldiers was 6,100. Just under half were “available for field duty,” he said, while the remaining 3,100 were either “used for controlling movements at Teenmurti Bhavan, where the body of the late Prime Minister was lying in state,” or were posted along the route from there to Shakti Sthal, where Gandhi was to be cremated. Vaidya said he gave Jamwal his consent to immediately extend military assistance to the Delhi administration if asked for.

But no one did. The Delhi police commissioner, Subhash Tandon, told the Misra commission that there were not enough army personnel in Delhi to draw on, but this was plainly wrong; the commission itself found that his contention was entirely “without basis.” If troops had been called in on the morning of 1 November 1984, the commission concluded, “5,000 Army jawans divided into columns and moving into the streets properly armed would not have brought about the death of at least 2,000 people.” In other words, at least two thousand lives were lost because the Delhi administration chose not to deploy the army.

Overnight, the violence in Delhi transformed. The Nanavati commission found that from the morning of 1 November the “nature and intensity of the attacks changed. After about 10 am on that day slogans like ‘Khoon-Ka-Badla-Khoon Se Lenge’”—blood for blood—“were raised by the mobs” that were soon operating across the city. “Rumours were circulated which had the effect of inciting people against the Sikhs and prompt them to take revenge.” One of these rumours that Sikhs had poisoned Delhi’s drinking water; another was that every train coming in from Punjab was freighted with dozens of dead bodies of non-Sikhs. “This was an out and out lie,” the Misra commission found, “but was intended to create the necessary panic and bring about the proper mood in the people constituting the mobs to react against the Sikhs.”

The mobs were well organised. According to evidence admitted by the Nanavati commission, the attackers “either came armed with weapons and inflammable materials like kerosene, petrol and some white powder or were supplied with such materials soon after they were taken to the localities where the Sikhs were to be attacked.” (The powder is likely to have been white phosphorous, a volatile substance not stocked in most households or ordinary shops. How an industrial quantity of this substance suddenly became available to mobs in Delhi was not investigated.)

The commission also acknowledged evidence that on the previous evening, “either meetings were held or the persons who could organise attacks were contacted and were given instructions to kill Sikhs and loot their houses and shops. The attacks were made in a systematic manner and without much fear of the police; almost suggesting that they were assured that they would not be harmed while committing those acts and even thereafter.”

One means of murder was common in neighbourhoods across the city:

Male members of the Sikh community were taken out of their houses. They were beaten first and then burnt alive in a systematic manner. In some cases, tyres were put around the necks and then were set on fire by pouring kerosene or petrol over them. In some case, white inflammable powder was thrown on them which immediately caught fire thereafter. This was a common pattern which was followed by the big mobs which had played havoc in certain areas.

Sikh-owned shops in these localities were “identified, looted and burnt. Thus, what had initially started as an angry outburst became an organised carnage.”

It seems clear from these observations that on the night of 31 October, instructions were issued on how Sikhs were to be killed, along with assurances that the police would not interfere. That disparate groups of rioters in different parts of Delhi spontaneously decided to string their victims with tyres and burn them alive is implausible. It is far more likely that orders to carry this out issued from a single point of command.

In March this year, in the course of reporting on Operation Bluestar, I met the former petroleum secretary Avtar Singh Gill at residence in Sainik Farms, Delhi. During one conversation, he told me that Arun Nehru, Rajiv Gandhi's close confidante, had sounded him out months before Bluestar about the possibility of the army invading the Golden Temple.

“As one of the few Sikhs in a senior position in the government—even though I was clean-shaven, he wanted to know my views,” Gill said, his back ramrod-straight. “He wanted to know how the community would react. It was not the first time he had spoken to me about Punjab, and he made no bones about his views. I remember him once telling me, with some pride, that he was a hawk. I told him such a move would be a blunder. Given the history of the Sikhs it would result in assassinations, and I remember using the plural.”

The mention of Nehru led Gill to relate his personal experience of the aftermath of Indira Gandhi's death. On 1 November, he went to his office. “Lalit Suri of Lalit Hotels, who used to come and see me often, dropped by. He was the errand boy for Rajiv Gandhi, and since he often needed some work done, he was close to me. He came to me in the ministry and said, ‘Clearance has been given by Arun Nehru for the killings in Delhi and the killings have started. The strategy is to catch Sikh youth, fling a tyre over their heads, douse them with kerosene and set them on fire. This will calm the anger of the Hindus.’”

Suri, Gill continued, “told me that I should be careful even though my name is not on the voters' list, the Delhi gurdwara voters' list. ‘They have been provided this list. This will last for three days. It has started today; it will end on the third.’”

Gill then told me an anecdote that captured something of the paranoia of that week. “On the third day, which was the day of Indira Gandhi's cremation, when people were paying last respects to her body lying in state at her residence—on that evening Lalit Suri sent a man to me in a car from the PMO.” The man from the Prime Minister's Office “told me, ‘Suri has said you still have not been there, it is evening, you must go.’ When I asked why, the man said, ‘It is all being recorded on TV cameras,’ and Suri sahib has sent him to fetch me. He took me in the car to where Mrs Gandhi was lying in state. When I reached home, my wife told me she had seen me on TV circling the body.”

That Arun Nehru had a role in the violence has long been widely rumoured, but Gill's statement marks the first time a senior government official has put the accusation on record. His story offers the first coherent explanation for the nature of the violence in Delhi. A detail in Gill's story also helps solve one piece of a long-standing puzzle. The lawyer HS Phoolka has been at the forefront of the legal battle to secure justice for the victims of the 1984 violence. When I told him about my conversation with Gill, he immediately seized upon the mention of the gurdwara voters' lists, which contain the names of people eligible to vote in elections to the Delhi Sikh Gurdwara Management Committee. "We had always wondered how government voters' lists were sufficient to tell a Sikh from anyone with the last name Singh," Phoolka said. "But, of course, the ease with which Sikh houses were identified would make sense if gurdwara voters' lists were available."

Ordinary electoral rolls may have been accessible or familiar to local Congress leaders, but low-level politicians would have had no reason to keep copies of the DSGMC lists, which were of no use in election campaigns. That these lists were obtained from local gurdwaras after the violence began is also inconceivable. However, Phoolka had reason to believe that the lists were available to people in the higher echelons of the regime. "When we were collating material to present before the Misra commission, we were told by some people in the intelligence community that shortly before Operation Bluestar, fearing a reaction from the Sikhs of Delhi, detailed information on the community had been gathered by the government," he said. "Unfortunately, we were not able to get any independent evidence."

In May 1985 a body under the Commission of Inquiry Act was set up. This new commission, constituted that same month, was mandated to "inquire into the allegations in regard to the incidents of organised violence which took place in Delhi following the assassination of the late Prime Minister, Smt. Indira Gandhi." This was the Misra commission, whose report was submitted to the government in August 1986 and made public the following February.

From the beginning, the commission was procedurally biased. Police officials and administrators were allowed to depose in camera; even lawyers representing the victims were barred from attending, let alone examining the witnesses. According to Phoolka, neither the lawyers nor the media at large learned of these depositions until long after they took place.

Seeking to justify the initial violence after the assassination, the Misra commission termed it "natural." Misra wrote, "According to the Indian tradition a lady cannot be killed and she is said to be Avadhya."

Sikhs are reputed for their valour and valiance. When two of the Sikh guards drawn from the police and meant for providing security to the late Prime Minister opened fire on her and she succumbed to the injuries thus sustained, a sense of universal anguish was a natural reaction. The Commission, therefore, accepts the submission advanced before it that the incidents against the Sikhs on October 31, 1984, started as a natural reaction to the situation and at that stage there was no organised attempt to cause or spread violence by rioting directed against the Sikhs.

Misra then considered the subsequent massacre : The cause for the attacks on Sikhs from 01/11/1984 had not remained the same. Taking advantage of the anger of the public, other forces had moved in to exploit the situation. Large number of affidavits indicate that local Congress (I) leaders and workers had either incited or helped the mobs in attacking the Sikhs.

But for the backing and help of influential and resourceful persons, killing of the Sikhs so swiftly and in large numbers could not have happened.

Even after making this observation, and citing compelling evidence that the violence was highly organised and systematic, the commission chose to absolve senior Congressmen and place the blame on local leaders.

This conclusion does not stand up to scrutiny. It's improbable that local leaders acting independently would have devised the same method of violence. The commission provided no cogent explanation for how mobs across the city arrived at Sikh homes equipped with tyres and ample kerosene, and settled on exactly the same means of killing and burning the bodies of Sikhs. There is also no explanation for why, in cities such as Bokaro and Kanpur where violence also took place, this uniformity was absent.

The commission went so far as to argue that senior Congress leaders could not have organised the massacre because, if they had, the violence would have been even more severe: If the party in power or a minister or well placed person had masterminded or organised the riot, the same would have taken even a more serious turn.

The commission's final conclusion was that the "change in the pattern from spontaneous reaction to organised riots was the outcome of the take over of the command of the situation by anti-social elements."

But no clarification was forthcoming of who or what these anti-social elements were.

After heading the commission, Ranganath Misra went on to become the chief justice of the Supreme Court. In 1993, following his retirement, he was appointed the first head of the National Human Rights Commission. Five years later, the Congress, then in the opposition, nominated him to the Rajya Sabha. The party's leadership, which was let off the hook by the commission's report, had rewarded its author with a seat in the Indian Parliament.

In May 2000, there was a final opportunity to arrive at the truth, when the GT Nanavati Commission was appointed by the newly elected National Democratic Alliance government. The first term of reference for the body was that it would "inquire into the causes and course of the criminal violence and riots targeting members of the Sikh community which took place in the National Capital Territory of Delhi and other parts of the country on 31st October, 1984 and thereafter."

GT Nanavati was a problematic choice to head the commission. In 1998, he was part of a two-member Supreme Court bench that commuted the convicted murderer Kishori Lal's death sentence to life imprisonment. Lal is often referred to as "the butcher of Trilokpuri" for his role in the 1984 killings. In the judgement, Nanavati and his colleague wrote:

We may notice that the acts attributed to the mob of which the appellant was a member at the relevant time cannot be stated to be a result of any organised systematic activity leading to genocide. Perhaps, we can visualise that to the extent there was unlawful assembly and to the extent that the mob wanted to teach a stern lesson to the Sikhs there was some organisation; but in that design, that they did not consider that women and children should be annihilated which is a redeeming feature.

It is difficult to follow the Supreme Court's logic that killing only the male members of a family mitigates the crime of murder. The judgement suggests that Nanavati had made up his mind about the events of 1984 before the commission was ever constituted. If he had already concluded that the violence in Trilokpuri was not organised, more evidence, and from other neighbourhoods in Delhi, was unlikely to change his mind.

In its 2005 report, the Nanavati commission effectively retraced the steps taken by the Misra commission twenty years earlier, and followed much the same reasoning. Like that previous body, the Nanavati commission, in its conclusions, contradicted the evidence placed before it:

Some of the affidavits filed before the Commission generally state that the Congress Leaders/Workers were behind these riots. In Part-III of this report, the Commission has referred to some of the incidents wherein some named Congress(I) Leaders/Workers had taken part. No other person or organisation apart from anti-social elements to some extent, is alleged to have taken part in those incidents. Smt. Indira Gandhi was a Congress (I) Leader. The slogans which were raised during the riots also indicate that some of the persons who constituted the mobs were Congress (I) workers or sympathisers.

According to the commission, there was simply no evidence that “Shri Rajiv Gandhi or any other high ranking Congress (I) Leader had suggested or organised attacks on Sikhs. Whatever acts were done, were done by the local Congress (I) leaders and workers, and they appear to have done so for their personal political reasons.”

Neither commission reconciled the contradictions in its account of the violence, and neither gave due consideration to evidence that went against its conclusions. Both bodies’ reports found that the carnage—organised through meetings that ensured police cooperation and a uniform method of murder across Delhi—was the result of uncoordinated acts by local Congress workers.

The 1984 massacres are a clear case of violence organised against a community by a political party for electoral gain. But these allegations have never been subjected to an honest, independent inquiry. The Misra and the Nanavati commissions sidestepped the question of a larger conspiracy. This had the legal effect of ensuring that any subsequent inquiries would be restricted to looking at the role of specific individuals in specific cases. If the conspiracy had been properly investigated, it is likely that testimony such as Avtar Gill’s statement about Arun Nehru would have come to light much earlier.

1984 Riots :

Thirty years of impunity

Thirty years ago, Maina Kaur was a young woman in Delhi all set to get married. Her modest home was filled with members of her extended family who had gathered for her wedding. It was then that a mob suddenly attacked her house. The attack was so brutal that it ended up in the murder of eight of her family members including father, brother, uncles and cousins. Maina herself was sexually assaulted and abducted by the mob and she returned home, ravaged and distraught, after three days. Her wedding was called off as the trauma wrecked her physically and mentally. As if all that suffering were not bad enough, the Indian state failed to deliver any semblance of justice to her. None of the accused persons identified by her and her mother have ever been convicted. In varying degrees and forms, such is the searing story of thousands of Sikhs affected by the 1984 carnage.

As somebody who has written on such repeated undermining of the rule of law, I deeply appreciate the gesture of the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission of the US Congress in organising this event on the 1984 carnage titled “Thirty Years of Impunity”. The meeting honors the memory of those innocent persons who had been killed in 1984 and pays tribute to those survivors who had been widowed, orphaned, grievously injured or rendered homeless. Let me also commend the Sikh Coalition for this timely initiative. I addressed a similar meeting five years ago in the historic building of the British Parliament commemorating the 25th anniversary of the 1984 carnage. The ongoing struggles for justice in India gain strength from such expressions of solidarity from abroad. The shielding of mass murderers can’t be passed off as internal affairs of any country. As Martin Luther King famously put it, “Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.” When the world is being increasingly globalised on the economic front, it is apt to recall an old saying in India: VasudhaivaKutumbakam. The contemporary message that can be drawn from this is that whether the world is one market or not, the entire humanity is one family. Indeed, more than globalisation of the economy, the world needs universalisation of human rights standards and practices.

The documentary we just saw – indeed, the circumstances in which the so-called Widow Colony had come into existence – testify to the horror and magnitude of the violence that we are commemorating today. Even for a country such as India, which is inured to mass violence, the 1984 carnage remains exceptional from a human rights perspective, for at least three reasons. First, it was the closest that post-colonial India ever came to a pogrom as the violence was almost entirely one-sided and the casualties almost entirely from one community and there was hardly any instance of police firing during the three days that the killings went on unchecked. It was as if the entire state machinery had colluded with the mobs targeting Sikhs in response to the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by two policemen of that community. The second exceptional feature of the 1984 carnage was the sheer scale of the death toll, although the violence had largely subsided in three days. Since the partition riots at the time of its independence way back in 1947, India has never seen as much violence as it did in November 1984, in a carnage spread across far-flung places such as Delhi, Kanpur and Bokaro. The third exceptional feature was that most of those genocidal killings took place in Delhi, yes, right in the Capital of a country that prides itself on being the world's largest democracy. The official death toll in Delhi alone was 2,733.

Given that I am speaking in the Capital of a country that considers itself the world's oldest democracy, I can't help wondering whether such a mass crime, in which rampaging mobs had fatally attacked hundreds of people, could have ever occurred in Washington DC? In the unlikely event of mobs taking over the streets of this orderly city, could the perpetrators of mass murder have got away with it? Could the security forces here have colluded with the mobs as blatantly as they did in Delhi? Could your President at the end of it all have dared to justify the mass crimes, as Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi did, by declaring that when a big tree had fallen, the earth was bound to shake? Such questions would seem equally inconceivable about other leading capital cities too. Whatever the provocation, could there ever have been such massacres, at any rate post-World War II, in London, Paris, Berlin or Tokyo? But if we look beyond liberal democracies, the scale of the bloodshed in Delhi 1984 is perhaps comparable to what happened in Beijing five years later, during the Tiananmen Square massacre. But then, those students at Tiananmen Square happened to be gunned down by security forces in a single-party political system; so the long arm of the law grabbed the protesters rather than the troops. Come to think of it, the death toll of Delhi 1984 was similar to that of 9/11. But again, there is a big difference: 9/11 was the result of sudden and unforeseen terror attacks, not mob violence that had deliberately remained unchecked for three days. By any standards of the civilized world, Delhi 1984 is one of a kind, a monstrosity without a parallel.

Honoured as I am by this opportunity to speak on the premises of the US Congress, let me dwell on the role played or not played by its counterpart in New Delhi in the context of the 1984 carnage. In the elections held within two months under its shadow, Rajiv Gandhi won the biggest ever mandate in the history of the Indian democracy. Consistent with the anti-Sikh frenzy whipped up by him during his campaign, Rajiv Gandhi was dismissive of the demand for a judicial inquiry into the carnage. As a corollary, when the two Houses of Parliament passed resolutions condoling the death of Indira Gandhi, they steered clear of any reference to the thousands of innocent Sikhs who had been killed to avenge her murder. This is in contrast to the alacrity with which the US Congress passed a resolution condemning the post-9/11 attacks on Sikhs although those were isolated instances based on mistaken identity. That the victims of the 1984 carnage were purposely ignored by the Indian Parliament became evident from its expression of concern around the same time for another distressed community: the victims of the Bhopal gas leak, caused by the negligence of an American multinational company. As a human rights defender, I urge you to commemorate 30 years of that industrial disaster too. The Delhi carnage and the Bhopal tragedy were separated by barely a month and there has been no closure for either of them. When the judicial inquiry into the Delhi carnage was finally set up after a lapse of six months, it turned out to be farcical despite being entrusted to a sitting judge of the Supreme Court, Ranganath Misra. All the proceedings were in camera, riding roughshod over the principles of transparency and accountability. It got worse when a few of the state actors appeared before it.

The Misra Commission ensured that their testimonies were recorded behind the back of the groups appearing for carnage victims. On the basis of such official testimonies which had thus remained untested by any cross examination, the Misra Commission absolved the Rajiv Gandhi regime of all responsibility for the carnage that took place on its watch. The crude cover-up did not end with that. When the Misra Commission's report was tabled in Parliament in February 1987, the ruling Congress party used its brute majority to gag the lawmakers. Given the tenuous nature of its findings, the government could not afford the risk of subjecting the Misra report to a discussion in Parliament. In a brazen display of their pliability, the presiding officers of the two Houses ruled out any debate on the report. There couldn't have been a more glaring abdication of the parliamentary function of holding the government to account on issues of national importance. Parliament's pusillanimity in the aftermath of the 1984 carnage legitimized impunity.

The saving grace is that Parliament did finally discuss the 1984 carnage, and that was over two decades later. It was in a vastly changed political landscape, long after Rajiv Gandhi himself had been assassinated by a Sri Lankan Tamil group. Though it was back in power when the discussion took place in 2005, the Congress party this time was leading a tenuous coalition government. By a quirk of fate, its prime minister Manmohan Singh happened to be a Sikh. The discussion was triggered by the report of a fresh judicial inquiry instituted by its predecessor, another coalition which had been headed by the Bharatiya Janata Party's Atal Bihari Vajpayee. While tabling the report on August 8, 2005, the Manmohan Singh government rejected its indictment of some of the leaders of the Congress party, including minister Jagdish Tytler and lawmaker Sajjan Kumar. Thanks to the outrage expressed by MPs from Opposition parties as well as its own allies, the Manmohan Singh government was forced to make a U turn in two days leading to Tytler's resignation from the Cabinet. The prime minister went on to tender an apology to the Sikh community and the nation admitting that the 1984 carnage was "a great national shame" and "negation of the concept of nationhood". This was the closest the Government of India came to acknowledging Rajiv Gandhi's monumental failure and complicity in the 1984 carnage.

The massacre at Trilokpuri, which claimed the most number of casualties in the 1984 carnage. In just Block 32 of Trilokpuri, the death toll was estimated to have touched 400. According to the officially recorded testimonies of survivors, the police facilitated the massacre by driving the Sikhs out of a Gurdwara and leaving them at the mercy of a mob led by a local Congress party leader. In a neighboring block, the police had even disarmed the Sikhs before the mob took over. The collusion was so pervasive that it took over 36 hours for the Block 32 massacre to come to light, although it was barely 10 kilometers from the Delhi police headquarters. The evidence available on Trilokpuri also nails the recurring claim that crimes targeting minorities are entirely or spontaneously the result of public anger. The anger in the public over Indira Gandhi's assassination, however deep it ran, was unlikely to translate into violence on such a large scale in Delhi without political instigation and administrative complicity.

Whatever the symbolic value of Manmohan Singh's belated apology, the fresh inquiry did serve to fill a gap in knowledge base. It helped me and H S Phoolka, the moving force behind the campaign for justice, to put together a book on the violence and its cover-up. Since the whole point of the fresh inquiry was to undo the mischief done by Misra under the guise of fact-finding, the commission headed by former Supreme Court judge G T Navavati not only conducted its proceedings in public and but it also released a great deal of the old records related to the 1984 carnage. It was mainly on the basis of these belatedly-released official records that Phoolka and I came out with the book titled When a Tree Shook Delhi: The 1984 Carnage and its Aftermath. Though published 23 years later, this was actually the first book on the subject. That there had been no book on it for so many years may come as a shock to people in the US, where issues of lesser consequence generate a flurry of books. The difference betrays a larger malaise in India: an appalling lack of documentation culture, especially on human rights issues. Clearly, this deficiency is another reason for the impunity.

The electoral endorsement of the 1984 violence and the impunity that followed set a template, which has been applied with increasingly corrosive consequences.

30 Years On

One hears that the grass has grown again and old domes have been plated with gold. Children of ashened fathers have acquired autos and crystals, and Lutyens' stones have bloomed

One hears about the impossibility of living in the past, difficulties of forever remaining within eddies of anguish

One hears the bankers and media-anchors talk about the need of the hour to move on

(Never mind the periodicity of Gujarat, Trilokpuri ...)

Ruin of language and biology and justice – For them merely burned incense-sticks
or a lost cricket match

Why then before each year comes to an end
I, like so many others, get Novemberized?

And, you, Jagdeep Kaur, how you have greyed, I hear your choking whispering, witnessing, voice still

When I woke up...

My eyes could not understand

Why I refused to see

What they had seen

A garden or metal or marble might hold some of your losses

But I am not sure time will smell like time again

Hope this entire nation tells its children what happened

As Primo Levi said, "Or may...

Your offspring avert their faces from you."

Hope this entire nation mourns and performs the deep crystal work with un-iced solitude and togetherness and engraves it all on its hearts.

No one can order anybody to unremember 84, especially not the perpetrator

One knows this all too well

(not after 3 days or 3 decades)

Dark clouds -

still ascending over Delhi.

To forget is to necklace the dead twice over with rubber tyres

To forget is to stop caring

To forget is to repeat

To forget is to cease loving each other

To forget is to die

Let us never and Never forget those erased simply because they were trapped in a certain body

Ash particles, floating in air. They are so near us

The dead
